

Let's face it: XM Radio is a paid service, much akin to cable television. We pay for our content -- we choose with our dollars what we want to hear. There is a great variety of music without the wasted time of endless commercials (unlike broadcast radio and broadcast television). The content is not censored: we get exactly what we pay for.

Therefore, to give preferential treatment to the establishment (aka NAB) because of political clout is short-sighted and inherently unfair. We pay for our service, so allow us to determine what we're willing to pay for. It is, at its very essence, the American Way -- economic success in the open market!

Thank you,

Dane Oliveira